COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course examines proactive community-oriented policing and problem solving (COPPS) in the context of changes in police departments and communities. Students will be provided with the knowledge needed to understand the COPPS philosophy and its applications for police and society. Students will examine the evolution of community policing, the relationship of the police and the community in the community policing philosophy, the implementation of COPPS, and methods of evaluating COPPS initiatives.

COURSE OBJECTIVES/LEARNING OUTCOMES:

Upon successfully completing this course, students will be familiar with the philosophy of community policing and problem solving in the United States and will develop an understanding of the processes involved in implementing COPPS in a law enforcement agency. Students will be able to:

- Define community-oriented policing and problem solving
- Explain the COPPS philosophy and how it differs from traditional policing
- List the various problems that are involved in implementing COPPS in a police department and local community
- Apply their understanding of problem solving to specific crime problems in the community
- Compare and contrast the practice of community policing in the United States with the manner in which it is practiced in Japan.
GRADING POLICY:

Student learning outcomes will be assessed using a combination of quizzes, written assignments, discussion forums, and exams.
