Exhibits

Note: Each exhibit required a prospectus that included a budget, analysis of artifacts, construction data, and shipping arrangements. Additionally, field research was necessary in archives, libraries, and museums. Most of the exhibits required a 3 to 6 month period of research. Certain exhibits required travel and research in Mexico. Construction was done on site under the supervision of the curator, and a catalogue was produced to accompany the exhibit on display. The curator was also responsible for a formal presentation to groups of visitors who visited the museum. Unless otherwise indicated, I was the head curator of the exhibits listed below.

- Fall 2008 The Battle of Ojinaga. Southwest Collection, Texas Tech University, Lubbock, Texas.
- Fall 2007 The Mexican Revolution of 1910. West Texas Collection, Angelo State University, San Angelo, Texas.
- Fall 2003 Battle of Ojinaga, as a part of Bandits, Hustlers (Exhibit was put in place by local curators). National Museum of Australia, Canberra, ACT, Australia.
