Learning Outcomes:
As a student, you should be aware of what instructors are going to expect that you are to learn from a course, and how this learning will be measured. This course includes several learning outcomes that are measured both objectively and subjectively. When you complete this course, you should be able to:

1. Explain understanding and identify various terms, concepts of international law.

2. Be familiar with the formation of treaties, terms, and principles of enforcement, interpretation, and application of treaties.
3. Understand the rules of recognition of states, governments, organizations and individuals under international law.

5. Understand the obligation to settle disputes with respect to civil and criminal cases applicable to existing international courts and tribunals.

6. Be familiar with the jurisdiction and mission of existing international courts and tribunals.

7. Be familiar with the basic rules under international law recognizing the use of force.

8. Be familiar the application of international law with respect to human rights, and the organizational systems protecting human rights

One consistent skill which you will need in any future career is that of effective writing and the ability to clearly communicate your thoughts. Therefore, you will be assigned discussion boards that evaluate your ability to write clearly. Your instructor will grade your assignment on technical skills, such as clear organization, spelling and grammar usage, as well as a subjective assessment of whether or not you are able to think critically and analyze both sides of a legal or social issue.

Grading Policies

The grades are based on participation in the discussion boards and completion of the final exam, 50% for the discussion boards and 50% for the final exam. There is only one (1) exam scheduled, the final exam. The final exam is due no later than Friday on the 8th week of class.
