COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course focuses upon embedded continuing challenges to the police in our country, upon inadequacies within professionals themselves and how these interact with each other. The course does not digress to deal with contemporary news-featured issues which come and go. Student will be individually guided into their own brief problem analysis project in addition to the main course material provided by the instructor.

Prerequisites

There are no prerequisites for this course.

Technical Skills Required for This Course

As with all online courses, students must be able to operate a computer and have the necessary technical skills to navigate around a web page. Additional technical skills are not a prerequisite for this course. However your computer must meet certain minimum requirements to operate Blackboard.

Time Spent on this Course

Students can expect to spend a minimum of 10 hours per week to complete all readings and assignments. The lessons themselves take as long as it requires the student to read the materials and watch or listen to media presentations.

COURSE OBJECTIVES/LEARNING OUTCOMES:

As a result of completing this course, the student will be able to:

- Describe fully and cite clearly the significant features of the evolution of the police in America.
- Trace the path and development of women in American Law Enforcement.
- Describe current contribution, functions, and service quality of American Female Officers.
- Provide a description of the nature of physical dangers to uniformed police officers.
- Thoroughly discuss the nature and features of stress upon human beings.

- Describe fully the role of stress in the uniformed police occupational role.
- Explain “Balance Activities” and measures whereby the harms of stress can be reduced.
- Discuss “Structural Problem Solving” and apply it to a significant personal stress challenge.

GRADING POLICY:

A student’s final grade will be based upon the point breakdown below. You may approach me at any point during the semester, and I will provide you with feedback on your progress in the class. However, you will be given feedback with all assignments when they are graded and returned to you. Therefore, please “keep track” of your points throughout the semester.

COURSE ORGANIZATION

Module One Evolution of the American Police

When students complete this unit of instruction, they should be familiar with development of our modern police tracing it from its beginnings in the cities and its function in the pre-civil war period through its modernization and the professional era. They would be able to identify the "Father of American Policing" and his important principles which we still problematically strive to fully implement today. Students should be familiar with the "community" model and its features as well as be able to evaluate it.

Module Two Entry and Development of American Women Police Officers

Upon working through this section of learning, students will be able to trace the approximate 50 year steadily increasing inclusion and involvement of American Females in policing. They should gain valuable insight to their unique characteristics, problems and unrecognized perspectives on many of the realities of both the work and the life of our "Women in Blue."

Module Three Real Life Contributions, Experience and the Quality of the American Female Officer

Spoken words and the printed page are sometimes simply inadequate to provide living situations. From examining the videos provided and thoughtfully commenting upon them the student should be able to both see and feel the American Female Officer, the life she leads and the quality of work which she performs - as she engages in the most difficult and problematic job there is: A street cop. The student will be led to carefully analyze and respond to thought provoking real situations which are encountered.

Module Four Street Policing: The Nature of Physical Risk

After experiencing the learning material presented in this unit of instruction, students are likely to obtain a much more valid picture of the degree and the nature of physical threats to uniformed police than is seen by the public. Quite significantly, they will see what is generally considered the very best professional training video made for law enforcement. It focuses upon the dynamics and threat of the insufficiently recognized edged weapons attack and provides real and workable defense methods and strategy. Viewing and studying ...and then providing brief written analysis of what the police should be taught illuminates critical police problems.

Module Five The Nature of Stress

When students complete this unit of instruction, they will have received an impactful view of "A Portrait of a Killer: Stress" Regardless of later occupation or life, the danger and damage of stress upon us is both unrecognized and incalculable. The video presented and the analytical questions associated with it have been designed to lead to major understanding of the many ways that human stress impacts all features of our beings; most are unseen and deadly. Featured are experts from medicine, science and a myriad of occupations who reveal information which should be shocking and alarming to us all. The effects of Stress upon us is clearly the most significant threat encountered in our lives.

Module Six The Role of Stress in Uniformed Patrol Work

Also video based, and asking for learner analysis and response, this module of instruction is both life and shock. Bottom line: nationally and statistically, every year in a police uniform will shorten one's life 6 months from the effects of stress alone. Fact. What does it look like? Predominately it appears as cancer, heart attacks and strokes. Here students will see stress come to life...or death...for Cops. Simply put, this learning unit was provided to cause anyone without a death wish to approach the next module on life saving Balance Activities seriously and learn from it.

Module Seven Balance Activities and Life-saving Stress Reduction

Presented for the student is a brief video description of activities and measures which are literally life- saving and changing if developed and implemented as part of one's everyday and continuing life. Learners are asked to develop and write up their own plan and program which believe they can permanently follow. Only the last two words of this requirement are hard. Students will grade themselves by their results.

Module Eight Structural Problem Solving

Again provided by video is a model for student success. They are asked to watch the video itself and schematically recreate the complete model for themselves. Following this they are asked to select from their lives a significant issue, need or goal and completely create a similar model to effectively deal with it.
