Course Description/Overview

This course is designed for students in the non-thesis option. The course has students apply analytical thinking, critical analysis, creativity and problem solving to the wide range of intelligence issues today. Students apply critical writing skills in completing a publishable, article-length paper based on their independent research.

Any student intending to graduate at the end of this semester, should only consider enrolling in the 8-week version of ISSA 6380, Capstone in Intelligence, Security Studies, and Analysis. This sixteen week version of the course is designed and intended for students seeking to complete their research project and research manuscript, before subsequently turning their attention to working with their Graduate Advisory Committee to prepare for and take the required Comprehensive Examination.

Course Objectives/Learning Outcome

As a result of completing this course, the student will be able to:

Comprehend principles associated with intelligence, security studies, and analysis.

Apply principles associated with intelligence, security studies, and analysis to a specific topic.

Articulate a clear research question or thesis statement.

Identify existing body of relevant research.

Conduct a simple literature review.

Apply an applicable research methodology in support of a research subject.

Arrange and assemble ideas, arguments, and points of view.

Relate the impact of intelligence to policy decisions.

Grading Policies

Grades will be based on the demonstrated ability to comprehend, apply, and arrange fundamental principles and relevant concepts for a research project, in a well constructed essay.

Thesis statement endorsement.

15% of the total grade. Initial, or draft, or working thesis statement with an ISSA faculty member endorsement, validating its association with principles of intelligence, security studies, and analysis. Ideally, this is a member of the students Graduate Advisory Committee, but any full-time faculty member of the graduate ISSA program will suffice.

Detailed outline.

10% of the total grade. See the ISSA 6380 Capstone Outline Grading Rubric for details on grading, below.

First full draft.

15% of the total grade. Initial or first full draft of the paper must be submitted through Blackboard. Email submission is not an option for this. Papers are reviewed only for completeness and what can be described as potentially catastrophic failures - glaring errors or omissions in an argument, for example. A close read is not conducted. No attention is paid to specific compliance with the writing style, or detailed review of grammar, spelling, etc. This is one small step to ensure that the first draft is not the final draft.

Faculty / Committee member review.

10% of the total grade. Student coordinates for a member of the ISSA faculty or, ideally, a member of their Graduate Advisory Committee, to conduct a peer-review of their draft paper and provide to them feedback. Submit the feedback - in whatever form it is provided - as proof the review is complete. Is that an email? An annotated copy of the draft? Hand-scribbled notes? That counts.

Final essay: Not later than 08:00 am CST Thursday of Week 16

50% of the total grade: See the ISSA 6380 Capstone Essay Grading Rubric for details on grading, below.

In review:

Thesis statement endorsement: 15%

Detailed outline: 10%

First full draft: 15%

Faculty / Committee member review: 10%

Final essay: 50%

Students are expected to write original material in support of discussion and essay requirements associated with this class. Please review the Student Handbook and Student Code of Conduct if you have further questions regarding this. You can certainly also ask your instructor - there's no harm in that.

Guidance on Writing Style for this course:

Chicago Manual of Style - how does this apply here?

Read Chapter 1 of the CMOs, version 17, and you won't find a subsection for graduate-level research papers. There is not one for college-level essays, for that matter. In theory, if a student has student an essay in college before using CMOs - they already know this. Likely, they don't - who really opens the full version of CMOs anyway?

Read Chapter 1. This is a paper, not a journal. If you later submit your work to, say, the Angelo State University Digital Repository <https://www.angelo.edu/content/files/26240-how-to-post-to-asudrpdf> or something like the Journal of Homeland and National Security Perspectives <https://www.angelo.edu/departments/security-studies-criminal-justice/call-for-paper/>, there will be other requirements. For now - there are no journal-specific requirements.

There is no running header or feet requirement. Use the traditional pagination scheme. An index is not needed or required. Include a title page with the paper title, author name and affiliation (program, department, university). If necessary or applicable, the title page can include an author note. The paper should include the text and an applicable bibliography or reference list. Papers may also include footnotes, tables, and figures; other sections of CMOs specifically address this. If you are including your own original research (e.g. social media analytics), a methodologies section is required.
