Teaching Experience

Angelo State University, Department of Psychology

August 2021 – Present

Assistant Professor, Tenure-track

- Graduate level:
 - PSY 6391 – Independent Research: A specialized course in independent research or directed reading. Emphasis on preparing and distributing research materials, practicing appropriate application of statistical analysis techniques to test a-priori hypotheses, and disseminating research findings verbally and in writing.

- PSY 6337 – Forensic Psychology: Study of the application of psychological principles and methods to address legal matters. Selected topics include false and coerced confessions, eyewitness identification, psychological evaluation, juror decision-making, and consideration of juveniles and elders in the justice system.
- PSY 6332 – Social Perception: Study of the integration of sensory information to draw inferences about the values, aptitudes, and personalities of other people.
- Undergraduate level:
 - PSY 4391 – Independent Research: A specialized course which may be directed reading or research for superior students majoring in psychology. Emphasis on preparing and distributing research materials, practicing appropriate application of statistical analysis techniques to test a-priori hypotheses, and disseminating research findings verbally and in writing.
 - PSY 4334 – Forensic Psychology: Study of the application of psychological theory, methods, and principles to address legal matters and improve the legal system. Topics include interrogation and confessions, eyewitness memory and identification, competency to stand trial, juror selection and decision-making, and other legal topics informed by psychological research.
 - PSY 4329 – Evolutionary Psychology: A broad survey of relevant areas of study in the application of evolutionary theory to psychology and human behavior. Appropriate for students in psychology and the biological sciences.
 - PSY 4323 – Advanced Social Psychology: An in-depth study of selected topics in social psychology emphasizing classical and contemporary readings. Students conceptualize relationships between social psychological variables and articulate implications for theory and everyday life.
 - PSY 4321 – Seminar in Psychological Research: A step-by-step guide to conducting research on contemporary topics in psychology. Students generate a research question; develop falsifiable hypotheses; design a study; collect, analyze, and interpret empirical data; write an APA-style research report; and present findings. This course places emphasis on applying these skills to enhance career readiness in diverse domains.
 - PSY 3325 – Psychology of Stereotypes, Prejudice, and Discrimination: An introduction to theories and research concerning the formation of stereotypes, maintenance of prejudiced attitudes, and effects of discrimination. This course explores a social cognitive perspective regarding stigmatized groups based on race/ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation age, ability, and appearance.
 - PSY 2319 – Social Psychology: A survey of the theories and research that characterize social psychology. Students learn to evaluate social thinking, social influence, and social relations by analyzing core concepts and integrating them with their personal and research interests.
 - PSY 2301 – General Psychology: An introduction to the scientific study of factors underlying human behavior. The course encourages students to develop a specific interest in topics such as intelligence, learning, motivation, emotion, perception, and others to guide continued study in psychology.
